

“One day a man named Bill Rodgers, a Knoxville car dealer whose passion and part-time occupation he calls “performance enhancing,” looks at the results of the Predictive Index personality test he’s administered to Michelle and Pat. “It’s amazing,” he tells Pat. “It’s like looking at a young you. Michelle’s more concerned with image, with wanting to be loved, but as for almost everything else – ambitious, competitive, outgoing, leadership, stubbornness, willingness to take on all the responsibility under extreme pressure – you could literally be mother and daughter!”